MR. SUNSHINE

When Ben Donovan (Matthew Perry) turns 40 he finds himself doing an involuntary stock take of his life – and coming up short. He's the operations manager of a B-grade sports arena, working for the ambitious and unstable Crystal, who has pressured him into giving her clueless son Roman a job. Then there's the marketing director, Alice, with whom Ben is having a casual fling, and Heather, his assistant, whose possessive behaviour includes once setting her boyfriend on fire. The series is the first real outing for Matthew Perry since Friends, and the mix of unlikely characters takes him away from his comfort zone and into a fresh brand of comedy.

DOCTOR WHO

The TARDIS has been hit by a solar storm, sending the Doctor and husband and wife Amy and Rory to a 22nd century monastery on Earth. Their arrival begins a war between the workers and their doppelgängers, created from “programmable matter” for the more dangerous work. It’s the kind of gripping sci-fi that has won Doctor Who so many fans. The story is told across two 45-minute episodes – “The Rebel Flesh” and “The Almost People”.

The Chef's Apprentice

Hosted by Kelly Young, who you may remember as the runner-up in New Zealand’s first MasterChef series, The Chef's Apprentice gives viewers an audience with the country’s best chefs and shows how to use their techniques in the home kitchen. The tips and tricks revealed on the show will benefit your waistline and your bank balance too.

Horrible Histories

Based on the book series of the same name by Terry Deary, Horrible Histories is an award-winning sketch series that brings sometimes-gruesome yet rich chapters of history to life for children. And it's been a hit, carefully mixing educational content with comedy, such as poking fun at the hygiene rituals of the Tudors or jokes at the expense of figures such as Winston Churchill or Christopher Columbus.
